Q: Add external dependency to Android project I have an Android project in Eclipse. (Kepler) The application depends on an external application(s) In one case I refer to a custom library which I have on my desktop. When using the shared library, I get error(s) when I run the app : "A problem occurred during setting up and registering of components" "A problem occurred during resolution of some components" The error messages do not tell me the actual reason. All I can do is close the app after a few runs. Using android studio, I don't have the same issue. Do I need to do anything to get the project useable when the external resource is on my desktop or the error will disappear? I have tried: Manually adding to the project build.gradle file Including to the manifest file and in the app See build.gradle: compile fileTree(include: ['*.jar'], dir: 'libs') A: Either add external jar manually, or install
