This new high-tech development builds on the virtual physics engine introduced in FIFA 17, making it the most powerful ever. In FIFA 17, players could run and dribble with real feeling, achieving true, intuitive control of the ball in all situations. The authentic touch of the ball is brought to life by finely tuned control of the 32 player models and ball physics. “The FIFA team has done an amazing job of scaling-up the game engine so that it can run at a new level of fidelity,” said David Rutter, Studio head of FIFA Development. “We are working with a much larger number of physics objects and players, resulting in an engine that’s smoother, more responsive and even more realistic. This new formula for weight and balance powers one of the biggest new features in FIFA.” Career Mode’s new, animated Player Trajectories technology shows each player’s trajectory, allowing players to follow their career even more closely. Players also now have many more animations: double leg tackles result in players falling with more impact, sliding tackles allow players to fall with less impact and players can now perform a number of new moves and feints. Fans can now watch and experience the full emotion of players diving on the ball, or work off the ball as they try to score. Fans will also be able to work their way up the National Team ladder with nine new national leagues. New Player Ratings System FIFA 22 introduces an all-new player rating system that covers more than 300 attributes and over 2000 different criteria, including: physical skills, ball skills, tactical awareness, shooting, technical skills, creativity, speed, agility, COD, Stamina, cognitive skills, teamwork and more. This process gives players accurate pre-match, real-time player comparisons. The result is the most detailed set of player ratings in the history of the series, and the most accurate player comparisons in any soccer game. The rating system adjusts for position and competition levels, showing the best and worst player comparisons in different scenarios, for instance, at a championship level vs. a younger, lower-ranked national team. The new and improved Physically Based Aerodynamics engine now creates real deformation of different surfaces. The result is more accurate ball-to-player contact, with softer, more realistic collisions, especially on wet/rough surfaces like grass, and reduced
