What IDE do you think the best one is for Ubuntu 11.04, using compilers like g++, g++-4.5, gcc-4.5, and also Eclipse and Netbeans? A: I would not suggest eclipse for C++ development, and it is more for Java than C++. I use Visual Studio 2010 for C++ and it is really nice. Q: How to detect user cancel subscription We have a Windows Azure Mobile Service project, and we are implementing In-App Subscription. After the user has created an account we send him an email, with a code, that he has to enter on the web-app page to validate the account. Then, we send him an SMS with a unique ID to that code. After the user enters the code, we validate the account on the server side (Azure) using the unique ID from the SMS, and the code that he entered in the web-app. We also send the unique ID to our data layer, and we do this on every operation on the server. To cancel subscription the user will call a web-api from the phone. Now, I need some way to know if the user canceled subscription, so I can stop sending that unique ID in the web-app and the data layer. Ideas? A: Thanks for all the replies guys. It took me some time, but the best solution I found is to include a boolean variable in your web-api, initialized to false. Then, when the user calls the web-api, the first thing we do is to check if this flag is set to true. If yes, then we set it to false, so the user does not receive any more notifications. If it's not, then we send the next notifications.
