The HyperMotion technology engine also has a long list of “player modes” which are used for training, coaching, stats and creating innovative custom training modes. It can also be used for commercials, high-end motion capture data for advanced motion capture and in-game player appearance, for instance, changing a player’s hair, eye and skin color. “I cannot describe how happy I am to be able to return to the beautiful city of Lyon, which I love so much, after five long years,” said MR and Head of FIFA Serger Chiero. “We started our work together here six years ago and we will continue the great work of our FIFAWORKS Team with our new colleagues. They’re young, passionate, and have a very strong attitude and this will allow us to make FIFA 20 a step ahead of the competition in all its aspects.” The Advanced Player Model used in FIFA 22, allows the player to be more realistically moved and animated. The AI engine is also more intelligent and makes more realistic decisions about risk taking and what to do next. FIFA 22 also features improved ball physics and new challenges.
